Reviews

Comprehensive guide! Its this type of very good read through. It is actually written in simple words and phrases rather than difficult to understand. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

Compare Infestis armis concurrunt, XXI. 5. Hence the secondary sense which it has here; hostile, dangerous. 4. Exercitu. From Note XIII. 2, cum exercitu might possibly be expected here; for the army might be conceived as simply accompanying Tullus. But more than mere accompaniment is expressed. Livy does not mean to speak of Tullus and the army as coming together on terms of equality; but to shew the manner in which Tullus comes--as an enemy at the head of his army, in hostile array. 5. Stativs. The adjective stativus (from sto) means stationary. Stativa castra, therefore, means stationary camp. Which two words being frequently used together, stativa came to be used alone in the same sense; stationary camp, head quarters; or simply camp, when pitched for more than one night. Similarly cani stands alone, without capilli, to mean grey iairs; dextra and sinistra, without manus, to mean right and left hand. So, too, primas (without partes) agere, to play first parts; calidam (without aquam) potare, to drink warm water. See XII. 5. d. 6. Ducit. Just as stativa came to be used alone, without castra, in the same sense as the two words combined; so ducit is sometimes used without exercitum in the sense, leads his army, marches, moves, as here; and educit a little below. 7. Quam proxime. Notice this construction for expressing a quality in a very great degree. Casar quam maximas potest capias comparat, Cassar gets together as large forces as...
