Reviews

Here is the finest ebook i have got read until now. It really is simplistic but excitement within the 50 percent in the book. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

Excerpt: . ; praecordial pain, palpitations and dyspnoea. The vertigo is frequently worse on rising, and is occasionally severe enough to cause falling and even syncope. Praecordial pain, as noted under pain, is described as shooting, catching or a grip on the heart, it is generally localized about the left border of the heart. Dyspnoea, doubtless often cardiac in origin, is referred to under the respiratory system. Subjective palpitation is occasionally noted. The objective symptoms are tachycardia, cold, sweaty hands, cyanosis and blanching of the extremities. Tachycardia is often very considerable; in my experience, it is not very often an initial symptom, but is developed in the course of a week or two. It is remarkable, since in this campaign, with all men inoculated against typhoid infection, the pulse rate is on the whole slow. In war-neurasthenia it is generally high, but I make no claim to a systematic study of pulse rates. The following were noted: --minutes rest, 130. Cases of pulse rate of 120 while merely attending an ordinary sick parade were very common. An objective symptom, less frequently met with, but sometimes very striking, is a condition in which the hands and feet are cold, sweating and cyanosed. The typical picture of a patient suffering from war-neurasthenia, in whom the circulatory system is affected, is that of a generally depressed person, listless and uninterested, with a slightly cyanosed face, much cyanosis of the hands, which are a little swollen, chilly and moist,...
